Not illustrated. 1770 Excerpt: .in the house of lords, he is sometimes there incog, to hear them, and every peer fits and speaks with the same freedom as if the king was absent. The full number of the house of commons is five hundred fifty-eight; but if three hundred are met, it is called a full house; and forty members, with the speaker, is a sufficient number to make a house. They fit promiscuously upon forms, except the speaker, who sits in the middle of the room upon a chair, with a table before him, the clerk sitting near him at the table. None but the speaker wears a robe, except the members of London, who at their first meeting appear in scarlet gowns, and sit on the speaker s right hand. Their time of sitting is in the forenoon: but upon urgent occasions they sit very late, and sometimes all night. Before the parliament enters upon any business, the members of both houses must take the oaths appointed by act of parliament. They are solemnly to declare and subscribe against the doctrine of transubstantiation, the invocation, and adoration of saints, and the sacrifice of the mass, by which declaration all papists are incapacitated to sit in parliament. They are also to abjure the Pretender. T bring a bill into the house, if the relief sought by it is of a private nature, it is first necessary to prefer a petition; which must be presented by a member; and usually...
