Music heard off, as if from parlors beyond. Padder, a waiter, enters, R. 1 E., carrying a tray, with ices, etc. At back, company dancing. Padder. I wouldn't be paid to dance on such a night. Hot enough carrying these ices and iced sherries. [Looks around.] Glass o wine, Padder? [Same buisness.] Thank ee, if nobody s looking, I will! [Same business.] He, he. [Empties one of the glasses.] If I ve took one of them, to-night, I ve smouched a dozen. Dr. Gossitt enters C. - type of old family physician; Pad. sees him and is embarrassed - with glass in his hand, which he finally puts in his pocket. Doctor. [As if heated, from ball-room.] Whew! Thermometer eighty-eight, and rising! Ah! my good man, you come very seasonably. [Takes an ice and begins to eat, sitting on c. seat.] Pad. I wouldn't like to take a contract...

Good e book and useful one. I have got read and that i am confident that i will likely to go through once more again later on. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.
